Kim Coots is a Spiritual Empowerment and Success Coach. She's passionate about helping people who lead and care for others make the impact they're here to make and experience personal fulfillment without burning out.

Kim struggled with anxiety, burn-out and frustration while serving as an Inc. 500 award-winning business leader, and she secretly studied spiritual healing modalities to revitalize and rebalance her life. The transformation was so profound that Kim launched a spiritual healing business to help others, but she kept her healing work low-key because she feared her business colleagues would think she was weird or not take her seriously in business.

Then, personal tragedy changed the trajectory of Kim's life and career when her only child, Keira, died unexpectedly from fentanyl poisoning, and her mother died unexpectedly three weeks later.

Kim went through the dark night of the soul, and encountered several debilitating health issues. When mainstream grief support and medical options didn't help, Kim turned to her spiritual foundation to find the hope, purpose, and meaning in life again. She speaks on topics of Sacred Empowerment so that leaders can make the impact they're here to make, without sacrificing their health, wealth, or joy.

Kim offers transformational programs, retreats, and sessions both virtually and in-person.
